ABSTRACT

This resource directory lists a total of 255 foundations, corporations, and associations that are actively committed to assisting not-for-profit groups and that appear to target their financial support toward youth, education, guidance, vocational and career education, volunteerism, and mentoring. Twenty-six of the 255 possible sources of financial support are grouped into a special chapter of Texas-based foundations that donate primarily to groups located in the state of Texas. Each entry includes some or all of the following: the organization's name and address, a contact person, a brief abstract detailing the date it was established/incorporated, its apparent major fields of interest, the types of support it provides, the number of grants it awards, the average grant size, the amount of money it donated in 1989 or 1990, and the number of persons it employs. Also provided is a subject index listing those organizations that manifest a specific interest in these areas: child development, child welfare, education, elementary education, employment, higher education, minority education, secondary education, vocational education, volunteerism, women, and youth. FOREWORD

There are a number of foundations, corporations, and associations that are very actively committed to assisting not-for-profit groups who have ideas, projects, and special activities that need jump-start support to create and implement them. The specific groups change their focus and priorities from time to time and their funding sources as well. This directory is current as of reported information from the 1992 versions of the following sources.

Encyclopedia of Associations, 27th Edition. Deborah M. Burek, editor. Detroit: Gale Research Inc., 1992.

The Foundation Directory, 14th Edition. Stan Olsen, editor. New York: The Foundation Center, 1992.

Standard & Poor's Register of Corporations, Directors, and Executives, Volume 1, 1992. New York: Standard & Poor's Corporation, 1992.

Standard Directory of Advertisers: Guide to 25,000 Corporations. Inge Rotman, editor. Wilmette, IL: Reed Publishing, Inc., 1992.

The authors have carefully selected from the thousands of groups those that appear to target on youth, education, guidance, vocational and career education, volunteerism, and mentoring.

The abstracts are short, but should give the reader a quick index to some of the more promising funding groups to consider approaching with ideas and proposals. A good source book on how to prepare winning proposals once you have identified a potential funding source is:

How to Fund Career Guidance Programs
COIN Educational Products

$14.95

A special chapter of Texas-based foundations is located after the main subject index. The selected foundations give primarily to groups located in the state of Texas. Fields of interest include child development, child welfare, education, elementary education, higher education, minority education, secondary education, vocational education, and youth.

The Small Business Administration was created by the Small Business Act of 1953. Its fundamental purpose is to aid, council, assist, and protect the interests of small business. It makes loans to small businesses, state and local development companies, victims of floods or other natural catastrophes, and for certain types of economic injuries. It licenses, regulates, and makes loans to small business investment companies. Programs it operates include the Minority Small Business and Capital Ownership Development Program and the Women's Business Ownership Program.
